PREACHER WOULD RATHER HAVE ROBUST BURGLAR FOR A FATHER THAN A CONSUMPTIVE BISHOP

University of Minnesota Sociologist Startles Eugenic Congress

LONDON, Eng., July 28.—"Hereditry has been pushed too far," declared the Rev. Dr. Samuel George Smith, the eminent sociologist of the University of Minnesota, when the World correspondent asked him today to expound further the theory involved in this startling assertion that he made yesterday in the Eugenic Congress.

"If I were to choose my own father I would rather have a robust burglar than a consumptive Bishop," Prof. Smith explained, "an important qualification of my statement, namely: That if I were a burglar's son I should want to be adopted into another family as soon as born."

"I am the heretic of this congress. I believe in social and moral forces rather than in mere biological experiments."

"What is wanted is that every child born into the world should have an economic education and moral training. Nature means well but society often does very badly."

"The only established point in hereditry is that the child receives from its parents either strength or weakness."

No Proof of Crime Hereditry.

"There is no evidence that criminality is inherited any more than consumption is inherited, but either may be acquired at an early age by contagion."

"A consumptive Bishop ought to have no children because consumption is one of the most evident reasons for physical degeneration. More feeble-minded children are born from consumptives than any other class."

Even though a burglar's son may prove a knave there's still a chance for reformation, but if a Bishop's son proves a fool there is neither help nor hope."

"Between 1850 and 1860 in France an investigation was made of the percentage of all accused of crime. It was found that the number of those accused who had some criminal ancestry was about the same as that of the whole population. In order to reform France by biological methods it would be necessary to lock up all Frenchmen."

New York's Great Work.

"The New York Children's Home Society for fifty years has been sending out thousands of waifs and strays who have been adopted by families in the West and have turned out as well as the average of the population. Many of them have shown political, intellectual and moral distinction. Their parents were social failures and in the majority of cases moral failures, too."

gratuity unless he agreed to a four-year extension.

Other provisions put a four-year extension on the same basis for continuous service benefits as a four-year enlistment. Here a decided distinction is made in favor of the man who extends his enlistment in the aggregate four years over the man who extends it only one, two or three years. Thus, in a continuous term of seven years, a man would receive during the fifth, sixth and seventh years the same pay as a man serving a continuous term of eight years; but on re-enlisting within four months the seven-year man would receive pay and allowances the same as in his seventh year—that is, the pay and allowances of a first re-enlistment; whereas the man who had served eight continuous years would receive, on re-enlisting, the pay and allowances of a second re-enlistment.

The bill further authorizes the discharge of a short-time man three months or less in advance of the expiration of his enlistment without depriving him of any of the benefit (mileage or transportation, honorable discharge gratuity, increased pay on re-enlistment, etc.) incident to completing his full term. The main purpose of this is to obviate the transfer of short-time men to a receiving ship to await discharge.

ARMY AND NAVY

The draft of necessary changes in the navy regulations has been prepared in the Navy Department, ready upon the passage of the naval appropriation bill, to put into effect those of its provisions which relate to enlistments. As agreed upon in conference, the principal new feature permits a four-year enlistment to be so extended that a man may serve five, six, seven or eight years continuous in one unbroken term of service. By regulations these extensions are restricted so that only desirable men will be allowed to make them. During the extension of an enlistment the pay and allowances will be the same as that of a reenlisted man; thus, if a man has extended his term for one year, making his whole term five years instead of four, he will receive the same monthly pay and allowances during the fifth year as if he had been discharged at the end of the fourth year and had immediately reenlisted for four years. If he had extended his enlistment for two or three or four years, his pay and allowances for all those years would be the same as in

Why Look Older Than You Are?

The gentleman to the right of the reader (sketched from life) is wearing old style or pasted double-vision lenses. The lines of the reading wafers are noticeably prominent and he has difficulty in adjusting his eyes to the lenses. The cement used to join the two lenses has become clouded and has made his glasses misty. The two figures to the left (sketched from life) are wearing Kryptok double-vision lenses. There are no seams on these glasses, because the reading lenses are fused invisibly within the distance lenses. These latter two persons are at ease, look dignified and comfortable.
